Mr. Miller denied assertiona by counsel for the men that they did not have a fair trial at Indianapolis. He declared that there was no basis for "the insinuation by opposing counsel that the men had been poorly defended."

Judge Francis E. Båker, after stating from the bench that it had been amply shown that many laws for the protection of life and property had been yellow.

ment had not reached beyond its jurisdiction, and because of the enormity and number of explosions, had punished for crimes punishable by various States. Mr. Miller said such proof would be given before the argument on the appeal is concluded to-morrow. Hockin and John J. McNamara were declared entirely responsible for the dynamite plots by attorneys in arguments to-day for the other men convicted of the conspiracy.

Amherst, Va., October 30.—The fourth annual exhibition of the Amherst County Fair Association began on Wednesday.

The favorable weather, coupled with good roads, brought out a large crowd, the number attending having been estimated by some to exceed 2,000. Wednesday being school fair day, most of the teachers of the county and the school children, the latter of whom were admitted free, were present.

One side of the exhibition hall is filled with the work of the school children. In the literary department there are letters, original compositions, specimens of penmanship and maps of Virginia, the United States and North America. In the agricultural department there is corn, black-eyed peas, sweet and Irish potatoes and pumpkins.
